Excerpt: . . . of the azure birds and run off, wild with joy, to Light. But alas and alas! All the birds have died. Poor Tytyl bursts into tears. But Light comforts him. Do not cry, dear child, she says. You did not catch the one that is able to live in broad daylight--we shall find him elsewhere. But Night and the Cat rejoice that the true bird was perched on a moonbeam so high that the children did not see him. THE ENDING I MUST leave you to read the play for yourselves, and to follow Tytyl and Mytyl on the rest of their adventures--to the Forest, where there is a battle; to the Kingdom of the Future and that of the Past. Only I am sure of one thing: that you will have caught the Blue Bird yourselves at least while you are reading the...
