As Alfred Dacre placed himself in his brougham he smiled. As they turned the corner at the gate, he looked back at Guildford House--at the drawing-room window, from which the light was gleaming-- smiling still, but with a shrewd, odd smile. The carriage whirled on, and he laughed merrily--Vive la bagatelle! Then he grew grave, very grave--sinking down from level to level, till he had reached that point which is deep thought. As we know, his hands were pretty full, and his brain teeming with all kinds of little plans. When Charles Mannering reached his chambers that night, he found, among more serious letters, a little note in his letter-box, which could not have been dropped there many minutes. It was signed Alfred Dacre, and said: -- my Dear Mr. Mannering, --I should so much wish that we...
